ADHD: A 21st Century Condition

There's no cure for ADHD at the moment but there's a great deal that can be done to help people with ADHD achieve their full potential. Much of this is around improving understanding of ADHD and providing tools and strategies that work – that's the focus for the 2007 ADDISS Conference!

The ADDISS conference is open to healthcare professionals, social workers, the probationary service, carers, parents/family, teachers and, where appropriate, the patients themselves.

We hope you can join us in London for what promises to be an informative, lively, challenging and fun meeting. See you in March!

Introducing - A new and exciting concept from Christian Moore - www.whytry.org What is WhyTry?

The WhyTry Program is a strength-based approach to helping youth overcome their challenges and improve outcomes in the areas of truancy, behavior, and academics. It is based on sound, empirical principals, and multi-sensory learning. The idea is straight-forward: Teach social and emotional principals to youth in a way they can understand and remember. This simple idea has reduced truancy, improved academics, and changed the climate of schools throughout the US. A recent analysis showed that it tripled the graduation rate of at-risk students in one district. WhyTry is currently used in over 4,000 schools, mental health facilities, and correctional facilities in 48 states, Canada, and Australia. The program is used by counsellors, social workers, special education teachers, and administrators to change the lives of students with a wide variety of backgrounds and challenges.
